STROKE OF GENIUS

As Hackney Today went to press, Britain was in the grip of some of the coldest weather in recent history, with temperatures plummeting well below freezing around the country. But that didn't stop some enthusiastic swimmers from striking out at London Fields Lido – providing inspiration for anyone thinking of taking advantage of free swimming lessons available for some residents at selected Hackney leisure centres. For more details on how the Council has been dealing with the severe weather conditions, turn to pg2

By
Karyn Michael

THERE'S good news for residents looking for ways to get fit this New Year, as Hackney Council's Leisure Centres start running free swimming lessons.

The lessons are open to those unable to swim, or who lack confidence in the pool, and fall into one of three categories: parents who can't swim and their children; disabled adults; over 50s; and young people aged 12 to 17.

Participants will be offered 45 minute or one-hour sessions, for up to a total of six hours. Sessions will be held at Kings Hall, Britannia and Clissold leisure centres.

Cllr Nargis Khan, Cabinet Member for Community Services, said: "Hackney has some of the best swimming facilities in London and I hope this will help more local people enjoy them, as well as giving them new ways to get fit.

“ Hackney has some of the best swimming facilities in London and I hope this will help more people enjoy them ”

“Widening access to sports facilities for local people is a key priority for the Council, so I would urge anyone eligible that would like to learn to swim to give it a try.”

The Council already provides free swimming for under-18s and over-60s in the borough. The new scheme is part of the Government's £140million free swimming programme, designed to give more people the opportunity to get active.

It is being run in conjunction with the Amateur Swimming Association and the lessons will be delivered by GLL, which manages Hackney's leisure facilities. Andrew Clark, GLL's Swimming Development Manager, said: “This is a great opportunity for anyone who wants to put a toe in the water and start the journey to learn an essential life skill for free.”

Residents are being urged to take advantage of the free offer quickly as places are limited.

Roads

As Hackney Today went to press, the severe weather conditions across the UK were beginning to have an impact on the delivery of Council services. Supplies of grit have been running short across the country and are now being controlled by central Government to be directed to areas of priority. Many London boroughs have run out entirely, and those which haven't, like Hackney, have limited supplies.

About 40 per cent of the roads and pavements in Hackney are being regularly treated. These are roads in the major town centres, bus routes, main roads and also those outside hospitals. In addition, where there have been requests, salt and grit have been given to the emergency services to assist them on their business and where there have been specific service requests which have been judged appropriate by officers. For example, Martello Street was added to a grit round to allow a funeral to proceed. Grit runs are taking place at least twice a day to cover the roads, in the mid-evening and first thing in the morning.

The Government announced on 8 January that councils were being asked to reduce their grit use by 25 per cent to ensure there would be enough to go round nationally. The cold weather is forecast to continue well into the week commencing 11 January. The Council is continuing to press for additional supplies.

Refuse and recycling

Refuse and recycling collections have been affected. The Council's waste department will start to clear the backlog as soon as it is possible to safely get heavy refuse trucks into the affected roads. That is planned to begin on 11 January, and if roads are still impassable, emergency measures will begin, with refuse workers carrying waste from residential streets to the main roads to be picked up by the trucks.

Schools

To date only 17 of Hackney's 73 schools have closed for any period. To check if your child's school is likely to be affected, call: 020 8820 7000, or visit: www.learningtrust.co.uk

Adult Social Services

Minibus transport to and from day centres are not currently taking place due to icy back streets. To make up for this, service users receive an extra home care visit. Meals on wheels – this is a vital service, and even in extreme weather conditions the teams work in pairs and meals continue to be delivered. Home care visits – again, a vital service, and staff attend these scheduled visits no matter the weather.

Good neighbours

Some residents, especially the elderly or disabled may find it difficult to get out and buy food or fuel. If you have a neighbour who you think might be vulnerable, please call on them to see if they need any assistance.

Mayor of Hackney, Jules Pipe, said: "The Council is working hard to reduce the impact of the cold weather on local residents and services. Like all other councils our stocks of grit are not limitless, but we are using it as effectively as we can. Our priorities are to keep Hackney moving, reduce the impact on services and support vulnerable residents."

A resident enjoying the free fruit on offer at a Hackney Homes winter warmer event in December

By
James Willsher

RESIDENTS are being urged to make use of a range of services this winter to beat fuel poverty – when 10 per cent or more of a household's income goes on heating.

Coldline, run by Age Concern Hackney, is a free service for the borough's over-65s, and staff can check if residents are obtaining all the income and grants they are entitled to, as well as offering advice via a telephone helpline.

There are also a range of other services available for residents to help tackle fuel poverty. Working in partnership with London Warm Zone, the Council can offer grants for owner-occupiers on certain benefits and landlords to pay for loft insulation, pipe and tank lagging, draught-proofing, boiler replacement and thermostatic radiator valves. Up to £1,000 towards the cost of such work is also available for those not on benefits, but aged over 60, and able to pay at least half the costs.

Help may also be available for older residents not on benefits but on a low income, from the Council's private sector housing department.

Hackney Homes offers householders advice on how to save energy at home, including low-energy lighting; green grants; and the cheapest dual fuel suppliers. It also provides free winter warmer events for the over-55s, featuring hot soups; fruit; free fleecy scarves and gloves; as well as information on energy efficiency, healthy eating and staying active.

“ Residents should not feel they have to choose between heating and other necessities ”

Cllr Nargis Khan,

Cabinet Member for Community Services, said: “Residents should not feel they have to choose between heating and other necessities, which is why we fund services to tackle fuel poverty and to help people stay warm this winter.”

Residents aged 60 to 79, and entitled to the Government's Winter Fuel Payment, will receive either £125 or £250, depending on circumstances, while those aged 80 or over can receive either £200 or £400.

Rising arena

By
Emma Britton

THE foundations of the 2012 Handball Arena in Hackney Wick are complete and the venue is starting to rise out of the ground.

Residents may have noticed that 13 of the 30 concrete walls have been lifted into place. Each is 10m high and will support the upper tiers of seating. The building is due to be completed by summer

2011 for test events. During the Games, the arena will seat up to 7,000 spectators and host qualifying games for the handball competition, as well as modern pentathlon, fencing and goalball during the Paralympic Games.

After the Games, it will become a multi-sports venue for the community, with retractable seating for around 6,000 spectators

A great opportunity to offer local residents access to world-class facilities and flexible facilities for indoor sports including basketball, wheelchair basketball, boxing, handball, badminton, judo, netball and volleyball.

Jules Pipe, Mayor of Hackney, said: "The new multi-sports venue in Hackney is a great opportunity to offer residents access to world-class facilities for a wide range of sports, as part of the 2012 Games legacy."

David Higgins, Olympic Delivery Authority chief executive, said: "We are right on track to deliver a distinctive Handball Arena that will provide a great experience for competitors and spectators during the Games and offer a new sustainable and flexible facility for local people to enjoy a wide range of sports in legacy."

Bill in the box

SHOULD you spot a shipping container in the middle of Shoreditch, take a closer look.

'Caveman Bill' in Hackney Recreational Ground is an art exhibition about a man who has lived in a cave in the Yukon, Canada, for 15 years. Bill became an inspiration for artist Tom Wolseley who met him while working abroad. Tom has made a video of Caveman Bill's life from a unique 360 degree angle. The footage moves round and round the cave, while Bill narrates over the top if it. Bill is never actually seen, but visitors to the installation can hear him tell stories about the cave.

Tom said: "To me he represents a romantic, almost fictional figure. In reality his life is both romantic and quite everyday. This combination questions the way we stereotype people and objects."

The project has been developed with local organisation the ROOM Gallery, with support from the Council.

Caveman Bill remains on show at Hackney Recreational Ground, off Hackney Road, until February 21.

Protecting history

THE Council has taken the unusual step of designating a new conservation area ahead of consulting residents – so that it can safeguard the unique character and architecture of Hackney Wick.

The implementation of the area, which lies immediately north of Hackney Wick Station, is a result of concerns that its proximity to the 2012 Olympic Park could see it come under significant pressure from developers.

This is only the second time the Council has taken such a step, and means it can prevent historic buildings being demolished or inappropriate new development in an area that is characterised by a cluster of historic industrial buildings.

The new conservation area is part of the Council's effort to guide future developments in the area. A public consultation on a draft masterplan for Hackney Wick is running until 9 Feb. The final version will sit alongside the Hackney Wick Conservation Area Appraisal. The two documents combined will set out clear planning guidance for any proposed development.

Resident of the year

Carol Jokhoo (above), from Millfields Estate, E5, has been an inspiration to many people. As chair of her Tenants and Residents Association (TRA), Carol advocates on behalf of older people and has run a mentoring course which is being extended to Clapton Park and Nye Bevan residents. She also co-ordinated the repair and redecoration of the community hall and has set up youth activities. Carol is currently liaising with other community services to provide workshops and forum groups to offer advice, guidance and training on a range of issues.

She said: "This award makes me realise how rewarding voluntary work is as it allows you to have more scope to make a difference and be more people centred which I think is where it all begins."

Young resident of the year

Yasmin Uzomah from Webb Estate, E5, is an active member of the Fawcett Youth Group, which recently collected a Philip Lawrence award for its campaigning work on issues affecting young people.

The group have made a number of short films, both fictional and factual, which highlight the challenges that face young people on their estate. Yasmin has gained confidence during the project from being a shy person, to acting in the film, and introducing it to an audience of 100 people at the Rio Cinema. Yasmin has also been involved in many other of the group's projects, including working with others to complete a Youth Opportunity Fund bid.

She said: "I was very proud to win, and really enjoy the activities that I do with Fawcett Youth Club as they are things I wouldn't normally. I hope there will be more awards to come."

Ron Devoti award

Alice Burke (above), from Nightingale Estate, E5, has been an active TRA member for many years. Despite ill health and personal tragedies she has tirelessly worked to improve the estate for residents. Alice has lived in Hackney for more than 30 years. She is always willing to help others and has an open door policy to her home even on Christmas Day.

Alice also sits on the Hackney Homes Board and is an anti-social behaviour champion for the organisation. She said: "I am delighted and very honoured to win this award."

PEOPLE who go the extra mile to help their neighbours were recognised in the Hackney Homes Active Residents Awards 2009.

Over 100 people attended a ceremony at Shoreditch Town Hall on 10

December to see the winners in each category congratulated for their service to the borough. More than 80 nominations were received across four categories.

Dame Anna Hassan, retired head teacher of Millfields School, E5, kicked off the evening by giving a rousing speech encouraging residents to play their part to encourage and inspire young people.

Warburton & Darcy Tenants and Residents Association (TRA) picked up the resident group of the year award. Its secretary, Arlette Mereau, said: "This award recognises the hard work and commitment of our past and current TRA group members and the support of our residents in improving our estate over the years. This award is a welcome boost."

Carol Jokhoo won the resident of the year title; and Yasmin Uzomah, young resident of the year.

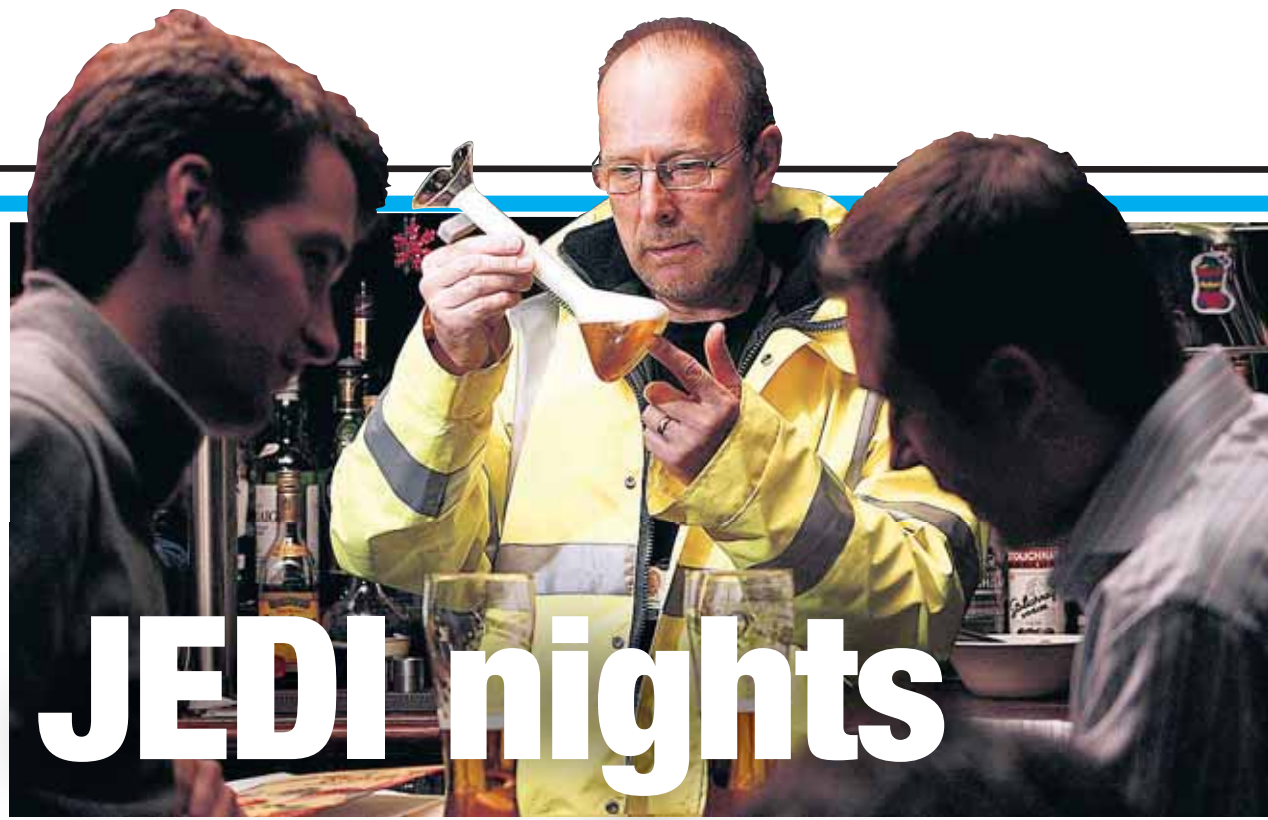

There was also a new award named after Ron Devoti, a respected resident who passed away in 2009. It recognises residents who have dedicated years to improving their community, and went to Alice Burke.

Resident group of the year

Over the years the Warburton and Darcy TRA has taken a very active role in improving the estate, working with Hackney Homes.

They have organised fire brigade safety talks, advice on saving energy, Purple Bus visits for young people and bicycle lockers. The TRA also advocates for vulnerable residents by helping to organise their repairs. They translate all meetings minutes into Turkish.

The TRA gardening club was established in 2000, encouraging residents to use the community garden to grow flowers, herbs and vegetables. Last year, members worked with the Council's Recycling Team and London Recycling Network to install a food recycling composting scheme in the garden, where residents can recycle peelings to make compost for the garden. The award was collected by Arlette Mereau and Seeta Samuel (left).

KEY FACT

A machine, which acts like 'an electronic sniffer dog', is being used to test for drugs as a condition of entry to some Shoreditch hotspots

In a bid to keep premises, patrons and residents safe, members of Hackney's Joint Enforcement Development Initiative (JEDI) visited six pubs, bars and off licences that were the subject of complaints, and offered them advice for improving health and safety.

The 15 police and Council officers also spoke to business owners about how to reduce noise levels during the early hours.

Cargo and the Hoxton Pony volunteered their support for a scheme that involves testing clubbers for drugs using a machine dubbed an 'electronic sniffer dog'. Both venues agreed the test would be used as a condition of entry in the future.

During the 11 December event, 50 voluntary drug tests were taken; seven tested positive and the revellers were turned away.

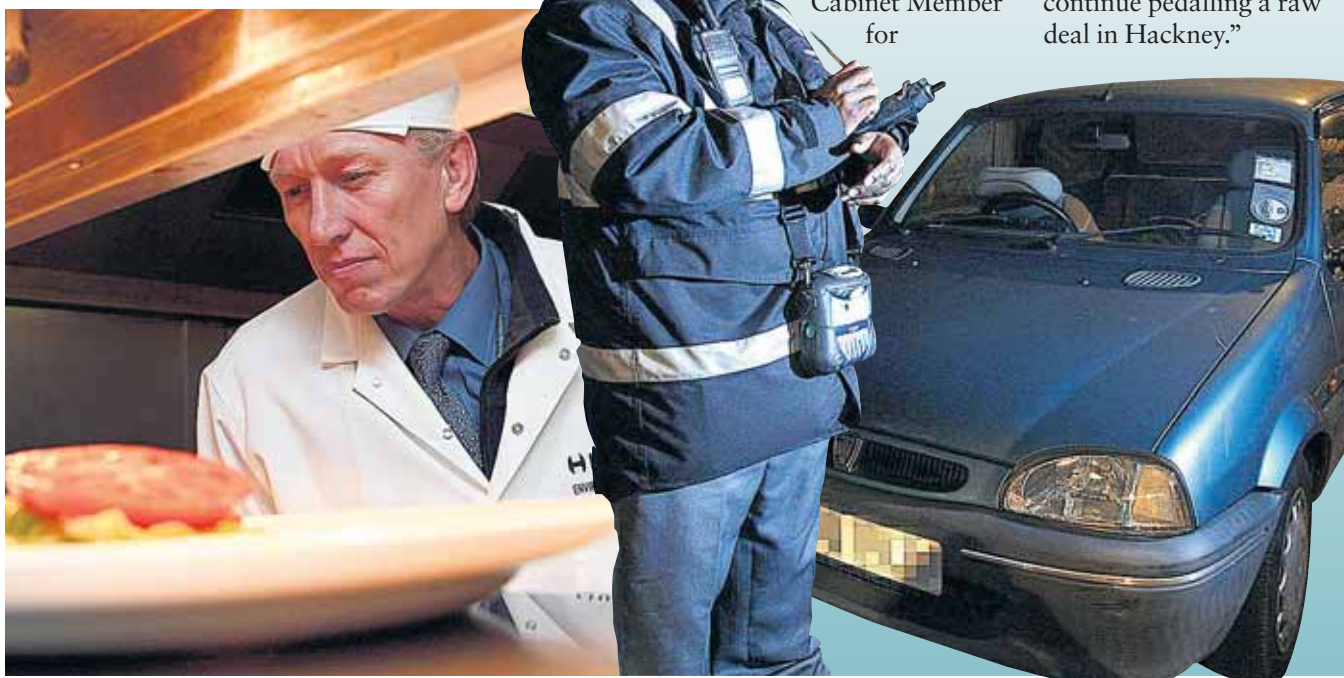

Most of the pubs visited also co-operated with the advice given by officers.

In addition, the JEDI team stopped an illegal mini-cab driver who had persuaded two vulnerable women into the back. Four people were also arrested during the operation on drug and drink driving offences. Cllr Alan Laing, Cabinet Member for

Pubs and clubs in party areas like Shoreditch have a responsibility to the community

Neighbourhoods, said: "Pubs and clubs in party areas like Shoreditch have a responsibility to the community who drink in them and the people who live around them. Through our joint enforcement efforts, we are sending out a clear message that those that fail to comply with the law will not be allowed to continue pedalling a raw deal in Hackney."

NEWS IN BRIEF

Puppy plea

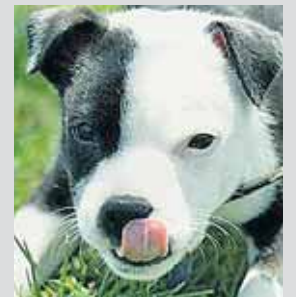

THE Council's animal warden is reminding residents that a dog is for life, not just for Christmas.

Hackney's Stray Dogs Service expects to have picked up 150 dogs by the end of March, up from 126 last year, and 19 in 2007/08.

The number of abandoned and stray dogs normally increases around Christmas and Bonfire Night, and in the school summer holidays, with Staffordshire Bull Terrier type dogs the most likely to be abandoned.

Cllr Alan Laing, Cabinet Member for Neighbourhoods, said: "Looking after a dog can be very hard work, making demands on your time, finances and patience. I would ask people to think very carefully before entering into this commitment. If you feel you are unable to cope, the Council can provide advice on dog training or rehoming."

The Council aims to reunite strays with their owners within seven days, after which they are sent to Battersea Dogs Home. To report strays, call the Animal Warden on: 020 8985 5930; for out-of-hours requests call: 08444 828 337.

RESIDENTS are being invited to comment online on the Mayor of Hackney's 2010/11 budget proposals.

These include a record-breaking fifth Council Tax freeze, with no cuts to frontline services – Hackney would be the only local authority in the country to do this.

Eighteen million pounds has been earmarked for keeping the borough clean, this would pay for town centres to be swept twice daily, and residential streets swept twice weekly; maintenance of over 10,700 street lights; plus more than three million household recycling and 8.5 million household waste collections.

Training and activities for young people would receive £68million, which can fund a number of activities including music, dance, drama and sport through local clubs or after school programmes, also information and advice on education and employment, along with Youth Offending Team support for 1,300 young people; placing 130 children with foster carers; and providing care packages for 130 disabled children.

It is proposed to spend £25million on public safety, by working with the police and partners to tackle crime and anti-social behaviour.

The Council is on the side of residents through difficult economic times

This is expected to fund around 17,000 visits to tackle noise nuisance, enforcement action against litter louts, and illegal street traders; 27,000 hours of CCTV; 6,000 food hygiene inspections; and 5,000 building control inspections, licence applications, and enforcement.

Nearly £18million is earmarked for culture and leisure, with £8.1million for Hackney's eight libraries and archives service. A total of £5.5million would be spent on maintaining 330 hectares of parks and open spaces, while £4.3million is proposed for sports and leisure, and developing activities that help improve residents' health.

Mayor Pipe said: "The Council is on the side of residents through difficult economic times – if my proposals are adopted we will be the only authority in the country to have frozen our share of the Council Tax for so many successive years. I believe it is our job to improve residents' quality of life and make the borough a better place to live and work. It has cost more to expand services as we have done, but this was not passed on to taxpayers due to over £40million of efficiency savings the Council has made."

The budget proposals will be debated by full Council on 3 March, and once approved, come into effect from 1 April.

Clockwise from above: The Mayor of Hackney is proposing to continue investing in a wide range of services including street cleaning, parks, activities for both young and older people, libraries, CCTV and leisure centres

Hackney highlights 09

January

HACKNEY'S annual youth cultural festival Discover Young Hackney was launched with an X Factor style talent contest at Hackney Empire. A key part of Hackney's Olympic legacy was secured as the Government gave a £135million boost to the 2012 media centres, ensuring they would be built as permanent structures in Hackney Wick. The borough also marked Holocaust Memorial Day on 27 January with ceremonies held in the Council Chamber and Town Hall Square.

February

A NEW sports club to bring together disabled and non-disabled young athletes, No Limits, was launched by Hackney's Olympic and Paralympic ambassador Dervis Konuralp. Residents woke to find the world had turned white following the heaviest snowfall in 18 years. With public transport at a standstill, many had a day off work and took to the borough's parks to build snowmen. Work started on a major £2.8million refurbishment of the much loved Clapton Library.

March

THE Council agreed a fourth year of Council Tax freeze, alongside a budget increasing investment in street cleaning, libraries and adult social care. Mayor Jules Pipe's pledge to plant more than 1,000 new street trees was fulfilled a year ahead of his manifesto target when the 1,000th sapling was planted in Dyvenor Rd, N16. Lucky pupils at Northwold Primary School had the honour of meeting Europe's oldest man, who at the time was one of the few surviving World War One veterans, 112-year-old Henry Allingham, who was born in Clapton in 1896, died in July.

April

THE Council introduced year round free swimming for all its residents aged under 18 or over 60. A series of action days aimed at cracking down on litter and blitzing graffiti took place in April as part of the Council's commitment to making the borough cleaner and greener. The best of the borough's entrepreneurs were also celebrated at the annual Mayor of Hackney's Business Awards, hosted by BBC Business Correspondent, Declan Curry.

May

THE Duchess of Cornwall proudly displayed an I Love Hackney badge on her lapel during a visit with her husband Prince Charles to Hackney City Farm. The photos got global media coverage, even earning Hackney a slot in Hello! magazine. Hackney's outdoor spaces got a £2.5million boost with 12 new play areas opening on estates and in parks, designed to bring natural elements into play for children of all ages. More than 200 of the borough's older people enjoyed a tea dance at Kings Hall Leisure Centre.

June

THE latest Home Office figures showed that crime in Hackney had fallen by an amazing 40 per cent in five years, meaning there were over 10,000 fewer victims of crime in the borough in 2009 than five years ago. This was a good note to leave Hackney on for borough commander Chief Superintendent Steve Dann who left to become Assistant Chief Constable of Hampshire. More than 2,000 people turned out to enjoy all sorts of activities at the BeRecreative festival in London Fields, and the Council announced a summer of activities for young people in the borough.

2009 was quite a year for Hackney. This feature looks back at some highlights of the last year of the decade, and celebrates the many significant events that took place in the borough over the past 12 months

July

JULY was a great month for parks and leisure facilities. Clissold Leisure Centre was rated one of the best in London by industry experts QUEST, and the Wet Sounds underwater festival returned to London Fields Lido. Nine of Hackney's parks were awarded prestigious green flag awards, making the borough's public open spaces officially amongst the best in the country.

The Council also secured a £4.46million lottery grant to transform Clissold House and Park. And Post Office users were given hope following branch closures, as the Council launched a consultation on its plans to reopen the Murray Grove Post Office in Hoxton.

August

CROWDS flocked to the Shoreditch Festival for six days of music, dance, film and arts and Hackney Today met the new Borough Commander, Chief Superintendent Steve Bending. Construction began early for the 2012 Handball Arena in Hackney Wick, and local long jump athlete Phillips Idowu made up for coming second in Beijing by winning gold in the World Athletics Championships in Berlin.

September

HACKNEY'S fourth brand new secondary school, the City Academy in Homerton, opened its doors to its first pupils, and received a surprise visit from Prime Minister Gordon Brown. There was good news for recycling in Hackney, as the Council expanded services to include Tetra Paks and many other kinds of plastic.

The hard work of Hackney's gardeners and park keepers was recognised capital-wide for the first time with a London in Bloom Silver Gilt award. More than 7,500 people turned out for the Hackney One Carnival.

October

MAYOR Jules Pipe announced his plans to freeze Hackney's Council Tax for a record breaking 5th year, while the Council launched a major public consultation on a proposed wind turbine on Hackney Marshes. Hackney Museum attracted visitors from across London for the 'Growing Up Black' exhibition of photographs by Dalston-raised Dennis Morris, part of a programme of cultural events in the borough for Black History Month.

November

HACKNEY's own global superstar Leona Lewis chose to perform her first ever full live set in front of an adoring home crowd at the Hackney Empire. The Council's residential care home in Median Road, Lower Clapton, was rated excellent by the Government for the third year in a row for the quality of its services to older people. Hackney born entrepreneur, Sir Alan Sugar, took his seat in the House of Lords, under the new title Lord Sugar of Clapton.

December

THE Council awarded £2.5million pounds in grants to 73 voluntary and community groups across the borough, including Hackney Age Concern, the Albion Kids Show, and Orthodox Jewish charity Interlink. The Hackney Empire launched its annual pantomime extravaganza, renowned as the best panto in London, with Aladdin. With even more outrageous costumes than ever before, Clive Rowe was in fine voice as the borough's favourite panto dame.

One eye on the past

Jim Campbell keeping one eye on the past as he studies old photos and planning designs of Stoke Newington Town Hall – which is being reopened as a public venue in February

By
Marcel Reinard

ON 19 February 1942, Jim Campbell's Stoke Newington house took a direct hit from a German bomb.

His father was dug out from underneath the bath tub he had been relaxing in moments before, while Jim and his two brothers found themselves dazed, but unharmed, in the rubble of their former home.

His mother, who had a first aid post at Clissold Baths (now Clissold Leisure Centre), received the dreaded communication: Direct Hit 70-74 Albion Road. Her family lived at 72. But most days in Stoke Newington proved more peaceful for Jim's family.

Neighbours donated clothes and they were sheltered in emergency centres and temporary houses over the next few years.

The boys were later evacuated to Rugby to escape the worst of the Blitz. Even Stoke Newington Town Hall – painted white for its 1939 opening – had to be camouflaged in a bid to protect it from aerial bombing.

Jim's family has a long history with the N16 building, famed for its dancehall days from the 1940s to 1960s.

"My parents were north London waltz champions and I guess this carried on to their children. After the war, my sister and I used to go to the hall too, though for jitterbug and swing dance competitions. You could say I knew my way around a dance floor," he laughed.

“Stoke Newington's just like any other inner city community – only more so”

Ironically, for one who spent 50 years teaching, Jim left school at 13. He celebrated his 17th birthday by joining the army and was dispatched to Germany in 1944.

During the train journey across Europe however, it was announced that the conflict was over. "I never tired of telling my pupils that the day Hitler heard Jim Campbell was coming, he gave up," he recalled.

After the end of hostilities, Jim worked in Germany for the Intelligence Corps, before leaving the army in 1948 to become a teacher.

When he returned to Stoke Newington, one of his first students at St Mary's Church of England Primary School was Barbara Deekes – later EastEnders stalwart Barbara Windsor – whom he described as 'delightful'.

He said: "I have very fond memories. Stoke

Newington itself was influenced by the influx of immigrants from the Caribbean, Cyprus, and Africa. Jewish, Christian and Muslim groups have lived relatively happily alongside each other for years.

"Sure it's had problems: we had a couple of gangs fighting here years ago, but it's just like any other inner city community – only more so."

Jim continued to live in interesting times by joining the Merchant Navy in 1952, taking part in the Suez invasion and spending the next few years travelling the world gathering artifacts.

On his return, he worked as a teacher and head teacher in primary schools in Shoreditch, until retiring 10 years ago.

"I still have great pride in Stoke Newington," he said. And with such a proud affiliation, Jim now provides talks to older people's groups and schools about the history of N16. Long may it continue.

THE GREEN GENIE

All your recycling questions answered

Q: I was given a Christmas present that I really don't need. Is there any way I could give this to someone who needs it or swap it for something else?

A: The Council's Give or Take events have proved popular with residents who have been able to get rid of items they no longer want, and take items they do. (See the advert on page 13 for details.)

Many residents have also already signed up to Freecycle, an international reuse website. Recently an explosion of other websites have sprung up online allowing people to swap unwanted goods.

Plus there are many charity shops in the borough that would willingly accept your item. Donate during opening hours and don't leave anything outside shops.

If you want to recycle a piece of furniture, you can arrange for it to be collected through the Council's furniture reuse service, and it will be made available to families on low incomes so they can furnish their homes. For info visit: www.hackney.gov.uk/waste_prevention

Plans for the the Arcola' Theatre's new building (main picture) which aims to be the UK's first sustainable major arts venue; Executive Director Ben Todd (left) and Artistic Director and founder Mehmet Ergen at the launch event

Eco-theatre plans

By
Emma Britton

THE Arcola Theatre has unveiled plans for a new eco-HQ in the heart of Dalston.

The project will be the UK's first major arts venue to place environmental sustainability at the core of its construction, programme and operations.

It will mean the theatre moving to a new building located close to the Dalston Square development and Dalston Junction East London Line station.

The project is part of a wider London Development Agency (LDA) funded project, Making Space in Dalston.

Mehmet Ergen, Artistic Director and founder of Arcola Theatre, said: "Our new building will include an exquisite 350 seat theatre allowing us to create an even greater and more diverse programme, building on our past nine years of success."

Plans also include 150 and 80 seat studios; an extensive foyer with a bar/cafe/restaurant and informal meeting spaces; space for scientists and engineers developing sustainable technologies; a bike hub with storage and changing facilities; and public garden and growing spaces.

"This will allow us to create an even more diverse programme"

Cllr Guy Nicholson, Cabinet Member for Regeneration and the 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Games, said: "The Council is committed to supporting Arcola's ambition to create an innovative new eco-theatre; ensuring that Arcola continues to contribute to the cultural excitement that is Dalston."

Global engineering and design consultancy Arup – whose projects include the Birds Nest and Water Cube stadiums for the Beijing 2008 Olympics – has been appointed to provide theatre and acoustical consultancy services.

Old clothes for a better life

By Naomi Ocansey

RESIDENTS have helped raise urgently needed funds to support international development – by recycling their old clothes and shoes.

Since 2003, the Council has worked with Textile Recycling for Aid and International Development (TRAID) to provide recycling banks for residents to deposit unwanted gear.

Nearly seven years on and 787 tonnes of waste have been diverted from landfill – equivalent to cutting 11,018 tonnes of CO2 emissions.

At the same time, TRAID has raised funds from the resale of donated textiles in its 11 charity shops. In 2009, it raised £500,000 for seven projects in Africa and India, including one that aims to halt the use of child labour to grow cotton seeds.

TRAID Chief Executive,

Maria Chenoweth-Casey, said: "TRAID recycling banks are the life blood of the charity, raising over £2million for development projects, diverting textiles from landfill and funding environmental and recycling workshops for 16,000 children and young people annually."

Money to use in the garden

By Jennifer Riley

A GARDENING scheme has been given a £150,000 cash-boost.

This means that more green fingered community groups can apply for small Capital Growth grants to develop their very own miniature allotments on unused ground.

In Hackney, there are already nine projects where you can grow your own, including one at St Leonard's Hospital in Hoxton.

Capital Growth was launched in 2008 and there are now nearly 150 spaces being cultivated across London in diverse locations including canal banks, schools, roofs, private gardens and parks. Rosie Boycott, Chair of London Food, said: "It's welcome news that Londoners can now apply for small pots of funding, as well as receive practical advice to get their veg plot up and running, helping us to meet our target of 2012 spaces by 2012."

Grants of between £200 and £1,500 are on offer until March to anyone who wants to create a new community food growing space.

Park plan shortlisted

A PROJECT that aims to transform the Lower Lea Valley has been shortlisted for a prestigious prize. The Lea River Park scheme will create six new green areas between the Olympic site and the River Thames, linked by the Fatwalk – six kilometres of parkland with footpaths, cycle-ways, new bridges and towpaths. The project has made the final five in the International Urban Landscape Award, which recognises groundbreaking initiatives in urban environments. Peter Bishop, from the London Development Agency (LDA), said: "The Lea River Park will be an exciting new park which draws on the Lower Lea Valley's

Mark Burton, the writer of family favourite 'Madagascar', got the roar of approval from Woodberry Down Community Primary School pupils

All stories by
Marcel Reinard

HOLLYWOOD came to Hackney, when the screenwriter of animated film favourite 'Madagascar' met with children from six local primary schools, including Woodberry Down.

Mark Burton, who also penned 'Wallace and Gromit – The Curse of the Were-Rabbit', participated in a lively event at the Rio Cinema in Dalston on 9 December.

It was part of the FILMCLUB Close Encounters after-school programme, which aims to encourage links between young people and the film community. Mark spoke to youngsters about his work as a screenwriter, answered questions and showed clips and storyboards from 'Madagascar'.

FILMCLUB was founded in 2008 by film director Beeban Kidron ('Bridget Jones' Diary: The Edge Of Reason') and educationalist Lindsay Mackie. It offers state schools free informal screenings, the chance to attend industry events and submit online reviews.

Since its launch, 29 Hackney schools have joined the network.

FILMCLUB is funded by the Department of Children Schools and Families. To find out more call: 020 7288 4520; or visit: www.filmclub.org

Hackney life through a lens

A PHOTOGRAPHY competition looking for the extraordinary among the everyday provided some insights into what the borough means to its young people.

Students from Hackney entered the London Legacy 2020 Schools Photography Project, which aims to record aspects of local life. Participants were given training with industry professionals, and access to workshops and digital cameras to help them capture and respond to issues in their area.

Rosa Levi Smythe, from Haggerston School, won the nature category for her photograph of a dandelion (pictured, right). She said: "I was fascinated by the intense light, I knew it was a dandelion and I thought it looked beautiful."

Tennessee Watt, also from Haggerston, waited in London Fields for two hours for a subject. The resulting picture won the places category. She said: "I was trying to find something that would be unusual and a funeral carriage came into shot. I took two shots and then it was gone. It made me feel so sad."

The project was supported by CMS Cameron McKenna and Thomson Reuters.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Together in electric dreams

A FORMER office worker has made an unusual career change – and landed a job on the London 2012 site in the process.

Kelly Drake swapped the office for overalls to do an electrical installation course at Hackney Community College, which she described as a much-needed career change from administration work.

After securing a position with the site team, she will now help provide electricity to the Olympic Park, which includes running cables and installing temporary lampposts and heating.

Kelly said: "Even though I am filthy by the end of most of my shifts, I absolutely love working on the site. It is quite fulfilling to know that I am helping prepare for such a great event."

Kelly will continue with her studies at the college while she works part-time on the Park in Stratford.

Workshop's healthy message

PUPILS from St Monica's primary school took part in a two-day workshop to promote healthy lifestyle choices. More than 170 children, aged four to 11, joined in the sessions run by charity Life Education at the Hoxton school on 14 and 15 December.

Among the activities for pupils was an anonymous electronic quiz that addressed misconceptions about drugs and health.

Life Education's Julia Enright said: "The voting system, similar to that used on 'Who Wants To Be A Millionaire', allowed pupils to get answers to questions that some may be nervous about asking in front of a classroom." Headteacher, Violet Richardson, added the practical workshop helped the children's self-awareness and understanding of what it means to be healthy.

Nat Finkelstein: From One Extreme To the Other

Idea Generation Gallery, 20 January-14 February

Renowned for his iconic and intimate portraits of Andy Warhol's Factory, photojournalist Nat Finkelstein's work is ripe for re-appraisal.

This mammoth retrospective traces Finkelstein's back catalogue across five decades: from the 1960s where he rubbed shoulders with emerging cultural figures such as Bob Dylan, Lou Reed, Andy Warhol and the Black Panther movement, up to his death in October 2009. Throughout this time he remained at the heart of the cultural zeitgeist.

A kind of blue

By Marcel Reinard

Way to Blue: The Songs of Nick Drake, The Barbican, Silk Street, 22 Jan

DESPITE achieving little mainstream chart success before his untimely death in 1974, Nick Drake has become one of the most influential singer-songwriters of the 20th Century. His fragile acoustic, often haunting, compositions were left on the shelves during his lifetime but have created a posthumous legacy. Shy and suffering from depression, he shunned interviews and live performances (to date, sadly, there is no known film footage). Yet today, artists as diverse as REM, Kate Bush, Paul Weller and The Cure (the last of whom took their name from a Nick Drake lyric) continue to attribute his music as a driving force of their own work.

An evening at the Barbican will pay tribute to the musician – curated by his producer Joe Boyd and featuring Danny Thompson, the bassist who played on many of the singer's recordings orchestrations, and arrangements from Robert Kirby, who passed away towards the end of last year.

Guest artists performing include Vashti Bunyan, Teddy Thompson, Green Gartside, Krystle Warren, Scott Matthews and Lisa Hannigan. They will celebrate Nick's music through modern reinterpretations of his timeless songs.

Revealing showcase

By Siobhan Silbert

Reveal, Stoke Newington Town Hall, Church Street, N16, 27-30 Jan

WHERE can you find a jazz and soul dance party, an evening of acoustic music, an old-time tea dance and exhibitions from local artists all under one roof? The answer is the 'Reveal' showcase, a programme of exciting events to celebrate the opening of the newly restored Stoke Newington Town Hall. On 27 January, the architects behind the restoration of the Town Hall will be giving a free talk on how it has brought back the building to its 1930s Art Deco glory. Acoustic performances from rising star

Richard Walters (pictured) – who has worked with members of The Cranberries and Supergrass – will play alongside Leddra Chapman and Al Lewis to provide a laid back evening of entertainment on 28 January. Local musicians Blow the Fuse and special guests including Sarah P, Alison Rayner, Deirdre Cartwright and Anne Day will put on a night of free jazz and soul music on 29 January.

Other events during the celebratory showcase include a tea dance for older residents, a health fair and an exhibition from Dalston-based arts community Studio Upstairs.

Crash course

More than 100 young people turned out to watch and then discuss the Oscar-winning film 'Crash' at the Town Hall

By Gracia Douglas

MORE than 100 teenagers turned out to watch a free screening of the Oscar-winning film 'Crash' at the Town Hall.

The event on 11 December was organised by young people who act as Hackney Democracy Ambassadors, with support from the Council's Youth Services, to launch a bi-monthly programme of films called 'Screenings with Meaning'.

The film was followed by a lively debate on some of its controversial issues like stop and search, immigration, family breakdown, inter-racial relationships, cultural intolerance and combating stereotyping.

Hackney Democracy Ambassador, Jade Benn, 17, said: "We want to encourage young people to be more insightful about social and political issues in a way that they can relate to.

The project will screen films that are entertaining and that will also provoke debate and promote involvement among young people from across the borough."

You name it

An artist's impression of one of the centres

YOUNG people have been invited to choose a name for a new generation of Hackney youth centres.

The Council, in partnership with The Learning Trust, is spending over £5million to refurbish three existing centres and build two new ones in the next two years, including a flagship building at Forest Road, E8. A competition has been launched to find a name that captures the possibilities of this ambitious programme.

"You choose: you win!"

The competition runs until 8 February and is open to 11 to 19-year-olds. The winning name will be developed as a brand for the five new centres and used on signage, merchandise and literature. Winners will get a free pass for an activity of their choice at the centres such as dance classes, sport sessions or training.

Reel action heroes

LOCAL young filmmakers have scooped a BAFTA award for their work to help improve their community.

The Fawcett Youth Group was presented with a Philip Lawrence Award for a series of short films highlighting some of the challenges facing young people on their estate in Clapton. Subjects included relationships, gangs, teenage pregnancy and crime. Yasmin Uzomah, 15, said: "We really enjoyed making the films. The group is made up of such different people there are always ideas from all kinds of perspectives."

The group's latest film focused on policing. Young people managed all aspects of production from scripting and research to budgets, filming and editing, supported by charity Elevate@SkyWay.

The judging panel included broadcaster Sir Trevor McDonald. He said: "The issues dealt with by this group are unquestionably important. The problems associated with how the police interact with young people are a big challenge."

Homerton hospital's maternity hotline has been short-listed for an award by the Royal College of Midwives

All stories by
Marcel Reinard

A HOTLINE for expectant parents has been short-listed for an award by the Royal College of Midwives (RCM).

Homerton hospital's maternity helpline was selected for the 'development of services addressing inequalities in health' category at the RCM Midwifery Awards 2010. It was set up two years ago with the aim of improving access to maternity care in Hackney as part of the borough's Reducing Infant Mortality Programme.

Staffed by experienced midwives, the telephone service puts women and their partners in direct contact with professionals.

Midwife supervisor, Alison Russell, said: "The success of the helpline has exceeded all expectations; in its first 18 months it's helped over 13,000 callers. Callers who were randomly surveyed at the end of its first year of operation called it 'absolutely wonderful' and 'very reassuring', recommending it highly to friends and family."

The awards will be held on 27 January.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Make room to quit smoking

GIVING a room a makeover could be key for those aiming to quit smoking, according to a national anti-smoking adviser.

The NHS Smoking Service has offered a series of tips for those making the New Year's resolution to stay smoke free – and just in time for January furniture sales.

Melanie Deweymarn, from NHS Smoking Service, said: "The most helpful thing you can do is keep busy and change your daily routine to counteract your usual smoking triggers.

If you always smoke in your lounge, rearrange the furniture so the room looks different."

Money saved from cigarettes – more than £2,000 per year for a 20-a-day smoker – could be spent on holidays, new hobbies or learning new skills, Melanie added.

"The most important thing is to commit to a date, then identify when and why you smoke so you can establish the extent of your addiction. Keep a 'smoker's diary' for a few days; write down every time you have a cigarette and what you were feeling or doing before you lit up. This will help you to identify your triggers," she concluded.

Healthy living for the winter

A SERIES of cooking and physical activities classes aimed at single parent families from African and Caribbean communities is being launched to promote healthy lifestyles in Hackney.

The Winter Wellness project will provide two five-week courses of joint parent and child sessions, which aim to emphasise the relationship between food, exercise and emotional wellbeing.

A survey by the project found that more than 70 per cent of parents had concerns about their children's exercise and eating behaviour and were interested in finding solutions to childhood obesity.

According to NHS City and Hackney, which funds the programme, obesity can cause diabetes, heart disease and strokes; it has also been linked with poor emotional wellbeing and depression.

If you are a single parent of African or Caribbean ethnicity and are interested in joining the programme, starting in February, call Winter Wellness Project on:

Centre marks Carers Rights Day

HACKNEY health officials were grilled during a 'question time' debate as part of events marking Carers Rights Day.

A lively discussion that included a panel of health care experts as well as Meg Hillier, MP for Shoreditch and South Hackney, took place at the centre on Tyssen Street on 4 December.

Hackney health officials debated a range of subjects at the centre

The debates touched on subjects such as care in the home, direct payments, respite for parent carers, funding and the issue of child statements – a legal document setting out a child's special educational needs.

The event was organised by City and Hackney Carers Centre, which provides advice and support for carers. It offers benefit and welfare advice, advocacy, counselling, assessments, trips, events and activities for carers who are looking after someone who is ill or disabled.

Hackney to the Hudson

By Elizabeth Green, Archives Access & Outreach Officer

THE American War of Independence from 1775 to 1783 saw 13 colonies in North America claim sovereignty and reject the British monarchy.

Among the British soldiers who went to fight in America was Clapton born John André (1751-1780), a man with a mission that might have changed the course of history.

André spent his early years in Clapton in one of three houses immediately behind the pond. He may well have attended Newcome's School in Hackney. Manuscript notes at the Archives list him as taking part in its performance of 'A Midsummer Night's Dream' in 1764, taking the role of Hermia.

André's father was a merchant in the City. His parents came from Geneva where he was sent to further his education, but he was back in England before he turned 18.

He became involved with the literary circle of poet and prolific correspondent, Anna Seward. He formed an attachment to her friend, Honora Sneyd. However they were prevented from marrying, possibly because André was not in a financial position to do so. Perhaps to address this situation, André consented to join his father's business.

On his death in 1769, the young André came into some money and joined the Army, obtaining his first commission in 1771. He went with the British Army to America and was taken prisoner in 1775 at Lancaster, Pennsylvania. On his release he rose quickly to the rank of major.

It was in this role that André embarked on the mission that was to lead to his death. The American General Benedict Arnold had indicated that he was interested in defecting to the British. He was in command of the American fortress of West Point on the Hudson River, and planned to deliver it to the British, along with a stock of gunpowder belonging to the American army. Under an assumed name he started a secret correspondence with Major André.

When the plans had been finalised, Arnold requested a meeting with a confidential agent of the British crown to make the final arrangements. André was entrusted with this dangerous mission.

After his secret meeting with Arnold on the banks of the Hudson River, André was forced to make his return to the British side overland through the American lines.

He used an assumed name and disguised himself as an American civilian. But he was captured and the secret correspondence he was carrying was discovered. Arnold received word of his capture and managed to make his escape. Because André was captured pretending to be a civilian however, he was treated as a spy, rather than a prisoner-of-war.

In spite of representations made to save his life, André was sentenced to death by General Washington. He was executed in Tappan in the state of New York on 2 October, 1780.

In 1783, the Treaty of Paris ended the war and recognised the sovereignty of the United States over the territory bounded by what is now Canada to the north, Florida to the south, and the Mississippi River to the west. Major André became something of a romantic hero in England and a monument was erected in his honour in Westminster Abbey, paid for by King George III.

Clockwise from above: Portrait of Major Andre taken from a 1784 engraving by J. E. Sherwin and published in 'History of Hackney, Vol 1' by Robinson, 1842; Beechholme House in Clapton, where Andre may have lived, c1860, artist unknown; Newcome's School; & a cover of 'The Gentleman Spy' by Adele Gutman Nathan, 1970

Hackney Council is committed to improving services, increasing opportunities for all, and making a safer, cleaner, greener borough. Here we focus on a service that helps to make this possible:

KEEPING A LOOKOUT

Nikki Coa is one of two female wardens patrolling Hackney

NIKKI has been a warden in Hackney for two years. She patrols the Shoreditch neighbourhood, keeping a lookout for safety issues, anti-social behaviour and environmental blights. She finds the public react positively to the wardens: "They know that they can come and talk to us when we're out on patrol or in the office – we're very friendly," she said. Nikki's favourite part of the job is being able to interact with residents of all different cultures.

She added: "Living and working in the borough, means I get to see the results of our work as wardens on a day-to-day basis. "Being able to help people use the services available in Hackney with confidence, fills me with a lot of pride. "I also enjoy the joint tasking we have with the police and Council, such as getting involved in projects late at night where we make the Shoreditch area safer."

By
Jennifer Riley

HACKNEY'S Neighbourhood Wardens are gearing up for an exciting 2010 – they are set to be equipped with bicycles and go borough-wide.

The wardens work with other Council staff and the police to reduce crime and anti-social behaviour. They patrol the streets, report anti-social behaviour and instigate clean-ups of rubbish. They also deal with abandoned vehicles and fly-posting.

Murat Ozcelik, Operational Manager for the Community Safety Team, said: "So more of our residents will feel the benefit of the service, wardens are due to be equipped with bikes and new radios so they can keep in contact with each other and make sure they get to where they are needed most.

"They've also been trained to issue people with fixed penalty notices for dropping litter, graffiti or fly-

Wardens keep an eye out for problems like fly-tipping tipping. This is a fantastic extra resource for the Council in the effort to make Hackney a safer, cleaner, greener borough."

The police are training the wardens to ride their new cycles. Murat added: "Wardens aren't there to catch criminals like the police, but they are visible and we hope that people will approach them with their community safety issues. The wardens will then work with partners to get the issue solved."

Rosemary's new crossing

PUPILS from Rosemary Works School in N1 have celebrated the official opening of a new zebra crossing that will help them travel to school more safely.

The new crossing in Baring Street, at the junction of Southgate Road, was jointly funded by Hackney and Islington councils as part of a scheme to improve pedestrian access to the school, Regent's Canal and Shoreditch Park. Work on the improvement scheme started in September 2009 following consultation with local businesses and residents.

The works also included a new road surface, pavements and bike stands. De Beauvoir ward councillor, Christopher McShane, Islington ward councillors and staff from Hackney's Road Safety Team also attended the opening on 10 December.

NEWS IN BRIEF

North London Line to close

THE section of the North London Line (NLL) which runs through Hackney will close completely from 20 February to 1 June.

A rail replacement service will provide buses every 20 minutes, six days a week, serving all NLL stations in Hackney. On Sundays this will be reduced to two buses an hour. Transport for London (TfL) says the closure from Gospel Oak to Stratford is necessary so it can carry out major engineering works to introduce longer trains and more frequent services.

Ian Brown, Managing Director of TfL Rail, said: "We apologise to passengers for this inconvenience and are doing all we can to minimise the disruption caused."

"We have to close this part of the line for this amount of time because of the nature of the work. Large amounts of material will have to be moved around for the signalling and track upgrades, which means if we were to restrict the work to weekends and then have to restore the railway to working order each Monday morning, the disruption would be over a much longer period."

Replacement bus services are due to stop at all NLL stations from Gospel Oak to Stratford except Caledonian Road & Barnsbury station. Find out more at:

www.tfl.gov.uk/overground, call: 0845 601 4867, or e-mail: overgroundinfo@tfl.gov.uk

Revamped Freedom Pass

A MILLION new look Freedom Passes are set to be issued in the New Year. The pass, which provides free public transport across London for the over 60s and disabled people, has been revamped by IT company, Fujitsu, after being awarded the contract by London Councils.

The new pass combines both Oyster and ITSO smart card technology with a photograph of the owner, rather than having to use a separate photocard, as is currently the case. All current passes expire on 31 March. Those needing to renew their pass can do so at the Post Office from 4 January. The process should take about 10 days.

£3.2m travel boost

By Gabriel Harriss

HACKNEY has won a multi-million pound funding boost for transport improvements.

Transport for London (TfL) has committed £3.2million for works during 2010/11, including £200,000 for road maintenance and £453,000 for major schemes. Hackney has developed proposals for a number of schemes it hopes to finance with the funding package.

These include £165,000 to extend the Council's school travel plan programme; £190,000 for road safety improvements for cyclists and pedestrians around Amhurst Park, N16; plus improvements to the urban realm on West Bank, East Bank and Amhurst Park in Stamford

Hill; and the installation of cycle parking at Stamford Hill mainline station.

In addition, £126,000 will be allocated to introduce measures to improve air quality including vehicle emissions testing, and £97,000 for cycle parking and training programmes.

There will also be £175,000 for 20mph zones around Victoria Park in line with the Council's commitment to introduce such zones on every residential road in the borough by 2012.

Cllr Alan Laing, Cabinet Member for Neighbourhoods, said: "While we welcome this funding and the flexibility it will provide in determining local priorities, we regret the 17 per cent cut in allocation to Hackney which means some planned improvements will have to be delayed."

Hackney is a fast improving Council, serving one of the UK's most diverse populations. Regeneration is improving housing, public services and transport links. Crime is falling. Exam results are up. The Olympics are coming...

Job Profile

John Wheatley

Head of Waste Operations, talks about the Assistant Evening Area Environmental Manager role

What are the main responsibilities of the role?

The team is responsible for keeping Hackney's streets clean and tidy 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

You'll manage the 2pm to 10pm shift, and work with managers on other shifts, so that the borough is clean at handover times.

You'll be responsible for street cleansing; ensure commercial refuse and market waste is collected; and that the streets are washed at close of market trading. It's a varied job as you're working during the day and evening in all parts of the borough. The night time economy in Shoreditch is very busy and different to what happens in the day in a shopping street.

In what ways is the role challenging?

The evening shift manager works independently. Managers will be on call, but you are often the lead person. We need a good people manager who is confident and experienced enough to work on their own.

You'll be responsible for ensuring our commitment to collect at a specific time is met. Sometimes you'll also need to deal with urgent work, like complications from snow or road traffic accidents.

How is the job rewarding?

You'll be part of a team that is dedicated to improving waste performance. The last inspection of Hackney streets showed the best results ever for clean streets and one of the best in London.

It's rewarding to see that Hackney is kept clean and tidy, a really important part of our residents feeling safe.

Part Time Front of House Receptionists

Job Share – 25 hours p/w • London • £15,500 - £18,500 pro rata + Benefits

Vanquis Bank is an exciting and innovative credit card provider who is part of a leading FTSE 250 Financial Group. We are extremely proud of the culture we have created here. Our people are working towards making the business a success through commitment, innovation and challenging experiences. This is a great role in a first-class business that supports employees, believes in treating people fairly, encourages team spirit and provides opportunities to develop.

Based at our London Head Office, you will be responsible for delivering exceptional customer service to all customers on the Front of House desk. You will ensure a smooth delivery of all reception services including (but not limited to) meeting and greeting visitors, answering all switchboard calls, coordinating meeting room diaries, managing staff travel requirements, dealing with incoming and outgoing post and other ad hoc admin duties.

There are two roles: one working from 8am to 1pm, Monday to Friday; the other working from 12.30pm to 5.30pm, Monday to Friday. Having worked as a receptionist in a busy corporate environment, you have the written and verbal communication skills to liaise with senior management and the experience to manage complex diaries and multiple meeting rooms. Add to that your excellent customer service, organisational and time management skills and you could enjoy the range of benefits that this great opportunity offers.

Send your CV, quoting the hours you are interested in, to Samantha Hunt, Human Resources, Vanquis Bank, 50 Pembroke Court, Chatham Maritime, Kent ME4 4EL. Email: recruitment@vanquisbank.co.uk

Please note: Once the closing date has been reached we will review all CVs. Should we wish to progress your application we will contact you within four weeks of the closing date. If you do not hear from us within four weeks of the closing date, unfortunately, your application has been unsuccessful.

On occasion we identify alternative roles that may be suitable for applicants and therefore we may retain your CV for up to 6 months for this purpose. If you do not wish us to contact you or hold your CV on file please contact us. We are an equal opportunities employer.

Recipes straight from the ovens at Hoxton Apprentice

www.hoxtonapprentice.com

Michael Wood, 22, started the training programme at Hoxton Apprentice in May 2009. Born and raised in Hackney, Michael completed his GCSEs but was unsure of what career path to take. Initially opting for an NVQ Level 2 in IT, he felt disheartened with working in short-term jobs interspersed with periods of unemployment.

He had never settled on a long-term career, until he heard about the Hoxton Apprentice. A keen cook at home, Michael hadn't considered using these skills in a profession before applying for its apprenticeship scheme.

Now five months into his back-of-house course, he is well on the way to formalising his new-found skills with an NVQ Level 2.

Speaking about his experience, Michael said: "The Apprenticeship programme at Hoxton Apprentice has been a life saver. I had no idea of what I wanted to do with my life until I came here. The training and support I received has been fantastic; what is particularly exciting is that you are working alongside ex-apprentices who are now professionals – they are a real inspiration."

Fishcakes

Makes 8-12 fishcakes

Preparation time
Under 30 mins

Cooking time
10-30 mins

Ingredients

- 450g/1lb mixed fish such as cod, haddock, salmon, smoked haddock
- 2 tsp fresh chopped parsley
- Mashed potato
- 1 egg, beaten
- salt and freshly ground pepper
- vegetable oil for frying

Method

- Heat the oven to 190C/375F/Gas 5
- Put the fish in a roasting tin and cook in the oven for about 10 to 15 minutes until opaque and starting to flake. When cool enough to handle, take off the skin, remove any bones and flake the fish into large chunks

- Mix the fish, potato and parsley together with enough of the egg to bind the mixture. Mix together carefully so as not to break up the fish too much. Season well
- Shape into 8-12 patties, depending on how large you want them to be, and chill thoroughly
- Heat some vegetable oil in a frying pan and heat the fishcakes until golden brown on each side and heated right through
- Serve with tomato sauce, parsley sauce or hollandaise sauce.

The Hoxton Apprentice is a social enterprise set up to train unemployed Hackney people – both in the kitchen and front of house.

Six-month apprenticeships prepare people for the workplace and give them the chance to gain an NVQ in Hospitality. Profits are returned to Training For Life, the charity which operates the restaurant, to deliver more training for unemployed people.

If you would like to offer an apprentice a job, or become an apprentice yourself, call Jeanita Snowdon on: 020 7749 2800.

Town centre plans

THANKS to everyone who had their say on planning and design masterplans for Hackney and Dalston town centres.

Residents had the chance to comment during a 10-week consultation programme last year that included setting up street stalls around the borough; 'meet the planner' sessions; meetings with stakeholders; and a series of targeted consultation events with older people, young people, and faith communities.

Around 870 issues were raised concerning Hackney town centre. They covered a broad range of topics including: urban design; shops and shopping; and pedestrian and cycle routes. Views on 'character areas' including St John-at-Hackney Churchyard and Gardens and Horton Road were also raised.

The Dalston town centre plans drew responses on around 1,240 issues. These related to: community issues, cultural/creative and third sector uses, open space and the public realm, and retail/night time economy. Concerns were also raised about the retention of Dalston's character; tall buildings and high density; pedestrian/cyclist connections and sustainable development.

All comments were considered and addressed where appropriate.

Phase one of both masterplans were adopted by the Council Cabinet on 23 November and full Council on the 25 November 2009. To read the adopted plans visit:

www.hackney.gov.uk
For info call: 020 8356 3000: or e-mail:

planning@hackney.gov.uk

The next planning stages take place later this year and in 2011.

The Mayor & Councillors

Councillors are elected by Hackney residents and serve for four years. The last borough elections were in May 2006.

Councillors have a range of responsibilities, including helping to oversee the Council and its services.

They all hold advice surgeries where you can meet your local representative and ask them to take up issues that may be of concern.

Generally they can help with Council related matters, but if the issue is the responsibility of another person or organisation, they can often point you in the right direction and tell you who you need to see.

Hackney has 57 councillors representing areas called wards – illustrated in the map opposite.

To check which councillor covers your area, or confirm surgery times, call: 020 8356 3373. More info: www.hackney.gov.uk/l-mayor-cabinet-councillors.htm
